
Datasets and Surveys

Research Data Centres (RDCs) offer Canada's research community secure access to detailed microdata from Canadian population and household surveys, censuses, as well as an increasing number of administrative files. RDCs are housed in universities across the country as part of the Canadian Research Data Centre Network (CRDCN).

Staffed by Statistics Canada analysts, RDCs operate in accordance with the confidentiality provisions of the Statistics Act [1] and are accessible only to researchers with approved projects and security clearance.

To view a comprehensive list of data available in the RDCs please visit the CRDCN Data website. [2]
