		“Where can Canadian experts go to seek/offer help in the time of COVID-19?”
		The pandemic has given rise to any number of new concerns, challenges, and scientific opportunities. Project leads Guillaume Bourque (Professor, McGill University) and Tara Moriarty (Associate Professor, University of Toronto) will speak and answer questions about the website COVID-19 Resources Canada . It’s an outward-facing central hub designed to help those involved in COVID-19 research and development in Canada to locate human resources, expertise, reagents, equipment and information in a timely manner. How is it different than the connecting platform of CanCOVID? Tune in to find out.
