Description

Egg Farmers of Canada is holding a special call for research proposals, for submission as part of the Poultry Research Cluster. The Cluster, administered by the Canadian Poultry Research Council (CPRC), provides an opportunity for eligible projects to receive federal funding in addition to industry funding.

Researchers are invited to complete and submit our full proposal funding application form during this special call for proposals. To be considered for funding, research projects must align with the outlined research priorities:

Hen welfare

- Hen behaviour and health in alternative housing systems, including housing system design, management and production practices, and pullet rearing
- End of flock management, including catching, loading and transport, and on-farm depopulation

Hen health

- Disease
- Gut health
- Dietary ingredients

Environment and sustainability

- Production practices and technologies that decrease environmental impact and increase sustainability

NOTE: Research should focus on alternative housing systems to align with the industry-wide transition away from conventional housing systems [2].

Eligibility

Principal Investigator must work full-time in a Canadian institution or organization.

Indirect Costs

15%
