Sponsor

Albert and Mary Lasker Foundation

Description

The Lasker Awards program was created in 1945 by Albert and Mary Lasker to shine a spotlight on fundamental biological discoveries and clinical advances that improve human health as well as to draw attention to the importance of public support of science.

Eligibility

Anyone who has made an original and significant contribution in basic or clinical medical research or in public service is eligible for nomination. Lasker Awards are highly competitive and are bestowed on individuals whose work opens new areas of biomedical science. Award winners may reside in any country of the world.

Colleagues familiar with the work of the nominee(s) and with the relevant field of research are ideal nominators. Self-nominations or nominations written by the candidates themselves will not be considered by the jury.

Prize

The Lasker Awards carry an honorarium of $250,000 for each category.
