Description

From conception onwards, the human body is subjected to complex exposures including environmental factors, our diet, lifestyle factors, and social influences, to which it responds. These highly complex interactions constitute the EXPOSOME and complement the genome. The term EXPOSOME was coined by Dr. Christopher Wild at the International Agency for Research on Cancer, World Health Organization. The exposome is the globality of the factors the human body is exposed to, from conception onwards. It complements the genome.

Eligibility

Postdoctoral fellows, researchers and health professionals doing fundamental or clinical research around the effects of the exposome on the skin.

Maximum Project Value

15000 Euros or approx $22,300 CDN per grant

Project Duration

1 year
