Program

Seeding Food Innovation Grants 2020 [1]

Description

In response to the immediate need to feed and sustain future generations, George Weston Limited and Loblaw Companies Limited believe it is vital not only to intensify production of more nutritious and ecologically-produced foods that reduce the reliance on water and chemicals in food production, but also innovate to improve food safety, reduce food waste, and ensure the ongoing health of soils. The Seeding Food Innovation Grants provides seed funding for research or technology development that help accelerate solutions to sustainable food challenges. Projects should focus on the intensification of the production of food in ways that are sustainable: environmentally, economically and culturally. Research outcomes should be highly innovative and impact primarily Canadians, but also deliver key learnings towards issues of global concern.

Type

Notes

If invited to submit a full application based on the results of the LOI round, please submit the complete application package along with a signed OR-5 form to resserv@uoguelph.ca [6] two weeks in advance of the external deadline.

External Deadline

Full proposal due to Weston through online system. This proposal must be authorized by the Office of Research Services through the Weston online system.

How to Apply

There are two stages in the application process:

1. Letter of Intent (LOI)
2. Proposal

An application requires the submission of the online Letter of Intent which will be reviewed by the Weston scientific review committee. Following evaluation, applications that are deemed to be high potential projects will be invited to submit a Proposal. Only ~15% of LOIs are invited to the Proposal phase, so that applicants and reviewers spend their time on Proposals that have an excellent chance of being funded.

Sign-in to the Weston online system [7] or register for a new account to submit a letter of intent. For Questions, please contact
